

Infinite Wisdom: Who Judges Us When We Die?

For Psychic Perspectives Podcast Episode 125: Who Judges Us When We Die?

YouTube Episode Link: <https://youtu.be/MaLlpfuHjIw>

Inspired Writing by Carol Geiler

Judgment is a sin against man. Why would a Divine being judge when there is no sin in the Divine? This is an absurd notion and we (in spirit) would like to dispel the myth of such things, for in judgment we assume that what one is undergoing (in life) is full of flaw or guilt or shame or even the need to adhere to certain principles or else be punished forever more. What loving God would do this or require such a thing from such a flawed species?

These (views) are the eyes of mankind seeking to create such works, to show man that these views must either be idolized and worshipped or shunned for their wickedness, and yet we (in spirit) say to you 'what man is not wicked in his own ways?' This would mean that all are condemned by God and yet what would be the point of such a travesty? For is it not in God's grace that you have been given this life to explore, to explain, to exploit, to experience in all manner of ways? Do you not learn from your woes and tribulations as much as from your joys and failures? This is the nature of life – not judgment, but experience and the whole-hearted opportunity to be and do more, even while knowing that you will fail and not succeed in perfection.

There is no voice that will judge you upon reaching the outer realms, for this is a fallacy created by man. It is he, your fellow man who judges, and you who judge yourself as flawed or gifted, creator or destroyer. All mankind exhibits all of these potentials in one form or another. Perfection is a state of judgment that what one feels or experiences is flawed and must somehow be eradicated, but is not pain and sorrow and tragedy as big a teacher and influencer as love or joy or success? Yes, we all desire good things and yet the bad happens, so how does judgment being heaped upon us offer any saving grace?

No, we (in spirit) say to you that upon reaching the heavenly gates you shall be rejoiced and praised and exalted for the physical life that you have been given. And then you will know the joys and pains that you needed to suffer or experience were for the greatest good of all. We will walk with you hand in hand as you revisit these experiences and show you the error of your ways, but this is not judgment. It is accountability that one's choices were made in either anguish and anger or in love, for even one's loving actions and intentions can still fail miserably in the eyes of another. This is not about judgment or right or wrong for there is no such thing. There is only the experience and what that experience has created for you and your soul and for those who are interwoven with you. So set aside such fears that God upon the throne or even the devil inside your mind shall rend you asunder and tear you limb from limb for your chastisements and failings. We are human – all of us have walked it at one time or another and all have failed in one way or another. No Divine Being will ever set you apart, for it is the very Source that has created you. It is for your comfort that the gift of Divine love is available to all, even in the state of deep and total surrender to the dark. This is the total love that all are allowed.

So when you step upon this world, this spiritual realm, you will not be separated from those you love but rather embraced with fondness and joy. And when you are ready, we shall seek of you redemption in one form or another so that you may release the earthly life and its woes and move on to greater things. What parent would not lovingly do this for their child? And so why would God not also do this for you?

Fear not, for Thou (God) art with you each and every step of the way! Even unto death's doors and beyond.